

Wireless Internet Policies

Revised 4-8-2008

- All persons accessing the Wireless Internet via the Library must comply with the current Mildred G. Fields Library Internet Policies for Internet use.
- Access points to the Internet are provided by the Library free of charge to patrons with the appropriate computers receiving the signal provided (802.11b/g)
- The Library Wireless connection is unencrypted and unfiltered. The Library will not allow users 17 years of age and under access the Internet using the Wireless connection.
- Use of the Library wireless connection is done at the patron's own risk. Information sent to and from your computer using the wireless connection can be captured by anyone else using the wireless device and the appropriate software.
- Library staff cannot configure users computers, since everyone's device is different and the Library cannot accept the liability of handling the equipment.
- The Library is not responsible for any changes made to your settings to access the wireless network.
- Printing is not available via the wireless connection.
- The Library does not assume any liability from loss or damage to patron equipment. Patron laptops and peripherals may not be left unattended for any reason while in the library.

I agree to obey all of the rules on the Mildred G. Fields Library Internet Policy for Internet use.
